

SOCIAL PRESCRIBING PROJECT – CONNECTING COMMUNITY

Referral Information for Health Professionals and those referring patients/clients

This program has been funded by a grant from Equity Trustees. It is managed by the Community Houses Association of the Outer-eastern Suburbs (CHAOS) Network. The volunteer community connector model of social prescribing was trialled in 2020-2021 following an ageing innovation grant from Equity Trustees. The successful program is now being expanded across the outer eastern suburbs.

Essentially the program aims to reduce social isolation and loneliness for people aged 60+ by linking them into social activities with the assistance of a volunteer connector. It has been inspired by the achievements of the Mendip Health Connections model in the UK and Bromley by Bow Centre in London. The key feature of the program is the recruitment and training of volunteer community connectors. The focus is on linking people to social and peer support activities across the community.

The volunteer community connectors complete training that includes:

1. Data about loneliness and social isolation and its health impacts
2. Barriers to participation and possible solutions
3. Tools and resources for linking (online directory and other agencies)
4. Boundaries of the role, health and safety for themselves and your client
5. Record keeping, evaluation

Volunteers are police-checked and attend regular team meetings with the program leader. The referral process we have devised is quite simple and is regularly evaluated for improvements:

1. Health professional refers their patient to the program using the LOBL referral form
2. LOBL program leader contacts the community member/ patient within two working days to explain the process and let them know who their community connector is so that they recognise the name when they phone them.
3. Volunteer Community connector phones the patient within five working days and discusses what they feel they'd like to do and what their barriers to participation may be. They let them know that they will do some research and get back to them within a week with some suggestions.
4. Community connector contacts community member/patient (will meet in a public place when and where it is safe to do so) and take them through the available options, providing details such as venue, cost, dates, how to get there, etc. If the community member/ patient is anxious about making the initial contact themselves the community connector will offer to make the call while the community member/ patient is with them to arrange their attendance.
5. If the community member/ patient feels they need support when they first attend the activity the community connector will offer to meet them outside the venue and take them in to meet appropriate people who will be assisting them to engage in the activity.

Follow-up:

1. The community connector will contact the participant a few days after the first session (even if they attended with them) to check that they were happy and are returning and determine if they are confident to attend alone. Alternatively, they will make new arrangements if needed.
2. They will contact them again after a further two sessions to make sure they are still attending and are happy. If not, they will offer to help them try an alternative activity or speak to the contact at the organisation if they have any issues
3. If they are happy to continue and are settled in, the community connector will let them know that their relationship ends at this stage but they are welcome to contact the Program leader again any time in the future if they require further assistance with connecting to other activities.

Other features of the project:

- Drop in Talking Cafes.

Talking cafes are being established across the outer eastern region of Melbourne. Once per week participants/ patients can attend a social meetup, Talking café, which operates as a drop-in at a local café where participants can meet in person and access more information about social activities in their community. Booking is not required and participants can come and go as it suits them.

- Searchable directory

There is a searchable directory on the LOBL website, which can be used by community members and referring professionals, family, and friends to locate activities. If you are unable to find something to suit your client/ patient please contact us for assistance.

Conditions for participation:

We don't have many conditions for participation in the project but we do ask referring health professionals to bear in mind a few things:

- We have minimal resources so can't provide significant amounts of time to individual patients
- Some of our connectors are volunteers
- Our Talking Cafes need to be a safe and inclusive space for people who are taking their first steps into re-engagement
- The community groups and organisations that we link people to aren't resourced to support high-needs participants

Therefore, we ask that patients being considered for referral are ready, willing, and able to engage in a social situation in an appropriate and non-confrontational manner.

If we find that a participant who has been referred has needs that we can't meet or doesn't seem ready to engage in a socially-appropriate manner we will contact the referring professional to suggest some alternatives.
